

ONENESS 101: 40 – Andean Unity & Integration

MariLyn and I will be in Lima, Peru from October 15-23. Our hotel is right on the ocean, so we expect to take numerous walks and have multiple meditations in the adjoining parks along the shoreline. Moreover, the hotel has a rooftop pool and sitting area, where we plan to spend considerable time in the silence, communing with the angels, ascended masters, space forces and higher astral compatriots that comprise our interdimensional team for anchoring a green pentagonal canopy of unity and healing over this 1st of 5 major areas; and linking with you and other light workers around the world. We will project Fifth Ray integration not only to Peru but also to all adjoining Andean nations: Ecuador, Columbia, Bolivia and Chile.

With 30 million citizens, Peru is the fourth most populous South American nation. It has 3 zones: a narrow coastal plane; the Andes Mountains and its high mountain valleys; plus the area east of the mountains, which is part of the Amazon Rainforest.

With 8.5 million inhabitants, Lima is Peru's capital that is located centrally on the coast. It is a primary commercial, financial, cultural and governmental center for the entire west coast of the continent. In recent years, Lima and some other parts of Peru have had a thriving economy. Still, about half of Lima's citizens live in shanty towns, many of which have no running water, electricity or city sewage. A majority of rural areas are mired in poverty.

Most other major metropolitan areas in South America likewise have vast shanty towns. Throughout the continent 10% of the people own 40-50% of the wealth. Most of the wealthy are of European heritage, whereas the huge lower class consists of native or indigenous peoples, blacks and those in rural areas. One of our projections to Peru and all the other 4 major centers will be for the rebalancing and transmutation of this disparity; which reflects a lack of love. Without unity, equality and integration in each country, continental unity is impossible.

Ollanta Humalla, Peru's new president since July 2011, plans to institute reforms to uplift and empower the poor, even as Peru sustains its economic prosperity. Moreover, he has vowed to root out the widespread corruption in government and in the business community. He hopes to model his actions after the past popular president of Brazil, Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, 2003-2010, whose social programs were hallmarks of his office even as Brazil became a world economic power.

Estimates vary, but from 30-45% of Peruvians are indigenous Natives or Amerindians. Another 35% or so are mestizos of mixed Native and European or African heritage. Throughout much of the rest of South America, only about 1-2% of the population is of Native background. Wherever they live, however, South America's Natives typically are the amongst the poorest of citizens, with limited rights and access to power.

In the Inca teachings of the Andes, 500 years of light and upliftment are followed by 500 years of darkness and suffering. With the coming of the white man to the Americas around 1,500 AD, the last light cycle ended and a 500-year cycle of darkness began for Natives. Now it is ending, with Native powers, heritage and talents being restored. This dawning of a new age of brotherhood is referred to as the coming together again of the eagle and the condor. The bald eagle is the symbol of North America whereas the Andean condor represents South America. Both birds portray rising into I Am consciousness and into the higher realms of the higher astral guides and etheric light beings.

In connecting with Peruvian Natives and indigenous peoples throughout the Andes, as well as those in the Amazon Rainforest and the rest of South America, envision this unification and integration of the eagle and the condor, as well as the osprey. Whereas the bald eagle lives primarily in North America (over 60 other eagle species live worldwide, including 9 in South America) and the Andean condor lives principally in the Andes (there is also the California condor species), the osprey lives for about 6 months in North America and then migrates to and lives for about 6 months in Central and South America. Thus, the osprey represents hemispheric oneness, unity and integration. See eagles, ospreys and condors as one. See North, Central and South America as one. See whites, reds, browns, yellows and blacks of the whole Western Hemisphere united and integrated as one in the One.

While in Peru, MariLyn and I also will connect with the I Am Selves of those who comprise the Secretariat or governing body of the Community of Andean Nations (CAN), which is in Lima. This trade entity first was formed in 1969 as the Andean Pact and was renamed The Community of Andean Nations in 1996. It promotes free trade and other exchange amongst its member nations. It originally consisted of 6 countries: Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile. In 1976, Chile temporarily dropped out, as did Venezuela in 2006. The Community of Andean Nations was the first example of the integration of one region of South America. This was followed by the establishment in 1991 of Mercosur, another trade union that was founded by Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay. In December 2004 at Cusco, Peru (shortly after my 2004 dream of visiting Peru's Andes mountains), leaders of CAN and Mercosur began plans to merge as UNASUR, the Union of South American Nations, which is based on the model of the European Union. All 12 South American countries now belong to UNASUR, which only became a functioning entity in 2011.

Visualization: To continue to lay the foundation for the 1st stop of the South America Mission, wrap yourself in light. Rise up on the wings of an eagle, osprey or condor into the spiritual stratospheres above Lima. Radiate Fifth Ray green light to Peru and to Colombia, Ecuador, Bolivia and Chile. As South America's spine, see these 5 nations as a pillar of strength in the newly birthed continental integration. Call forth the healing of the soul scars from past mistreatment of Native Americans. Envision equality everywhere. See a new heaven descending upon a new earth.
